DR. JOSEPH FORT
NEWTON BECOMES AN EPISCOPALEANFormer Dixon Minister to Take Church in Philadelphia

The following from the New York Evening Post of Tuesday, Sept. 15th, concerning Rev. Joseph Fort Newton, former beloved and popular pastor of the Peoples church of this city, will be of interest to his many friends here:

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Fort Newton is known about going to Philadelphia, to become rector of the Protestant Episcopal Memorial Church of St. Paul, because he wants to get back to America and because he likes Quakers.

"For years," he said, "I have been preaching in such foreign cities as London and New York, and I'll be happy to return to my own people, the Americans, in an American city like Philadelphia. New York is getting to be more and more of a foreign city, and the new immigration restrictions will not stop it, because boot-legging in foreigners is going on at a great rate.

"I like the mysticism of the Quakers. It helps make Philadelphia deserve its name—the City of Brotherly Love. I am a student of mysticism and of symbolism, which was vindicated in a thousand ways during the World War."

Dr. Newton was first a Baptist in Paris, Tex., his home State, then founder of the People's Liberal Church, Dixon, Ill., then head of a Liberal Church in Iowa, then at the City Temple, London, and now a Congregationalist preacher in the Universalist Church of the Divine Paternity. He explained that his war experiences drew him toward the Church of England.

"I found," he said, "that at the most profound moments my reason failed me; I needed something to cling to. So did the soldiers. A boy lay dying in my arms. He asked me to comfort him. 'But no deep stuff, doctor,' he said. The cross was enough, a symbol of faith.

Dr. Newton considers it wrong to violate prohibition. He believes that in the next generation the country will be really dry.

Dr. Newton is soon to publish a book, "My Idea of God." It will contain chapters on this subject by many church leaders—Roman Catholic, Jewish, Christian Science, Quaker, Fundamentalist, Modernist, Ethical Culture and Agnostic.

Board of Inquiry of Air Service is Ready

Washington, Sept. 18—(AP)—The air-craft situation moved toward a complete sifting today as the President's special board of inquiry prepared for the opening of public hearings here next Monday.

Selection of a list of witnesses was the task assigned to several members of the board today.

Dwight W. Morrow, chairman of the president's board, announced that it planned to hear first representatives of the army, the navy and the postoffice. From this testimony the board presumably will chart the subsequent course of the broad inquiry with which the President has charged it, with witnesses to be asked for "criticisms and constructive suggestions."

Arrangements for the calling of witnesses and decision on initial matters of policy and procedure will occupy board members in the three days intervening before the hearings.

Stolen Money Orders
Cashed by Swindlers

Leaving a trail of worthless money orders in their wake, a young man and woman included Rockford in their itinerary, victimizing local merchants out of $225, it was learned upon the arrival of Postoffice Inspector Walter L. Olson, who is investigating the cashing of stolen money orders there.

The money orders were stolen at Indianapolis, Ind., about one year ago, the postoffice inspector said, but with no trace of their disappearance until recently when a young couple believed to be traveling by automobile, started flooding cities in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin with the worthless orders.

Catastrophe is Hanging Over Us,
Conan Doyle Says

London, Sept. 18—(AP)—Every one is warned by the spirit world, through the medium of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, that a great catastrophe hangs over the world.

Sir Arthur says he has been receiving messages from the spirit world for the last three years to this effect and that lately they have become so pressing he feels it necessary to make them public. He asserts that the suffering and destruction which will result are to be taken as a chastening for the evils of today.

Only through this manner can the world be saved.

The nature of the impending catastrophe is so vague that Sir Arthur is unable to specify it, but he says the chastening will last three years.

"The world has grown far too material," Sir Arthur warns. "We must be taught that life has a spiritual and not a material purpose."

Sir Arthur declares that England will escape from the catastrophe more lightly than almost any other nation. Why, he does not say.

DISSENTION IN ENEMY'S RANKS
AIDS YOUNG BOBEfforts of Antis to Center on One Man Not Successful

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 18—(AP)—Dissention in the anti-La Follette republican ranks, which has been more or less apparent during the campaign for U. S. senator, came to a head yesterday when, after a conference of leaders for the purpose of uniting on one candidate, two candidates appeared. Roy P. Wilcox and Edward F. Dithmar. However the conference succeeded in eliminating one man, Arthur Barry, the only avowed wet candidate.

Wilcox, defeated by Robert M. La Follette for the republican nomination, in a statement, declared he was in the race to the finish as an independent candidate and that he refused to compromise. Dithmar also issued a statement saying he feels bound by his word to those who signed his registration petition to make the race.

In the background, waiting for the situation to clarify, sits Daniel Woodward, with the endorsement of the Ku Klux Klan, who ran a good third. He has announced he will get on the ticket if he finds it necessary.

Risley was today notified that Malcolm Herbert of Sterling, who was fined here July 21 for impersonating an officer, following his arrest at Lowell Park, is wanted in Waterloo, Iowa, for the murder, last night, of Albert Heiske. Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 18—(AP)—Posses were today searching in the surrounding country for Malcolm Herbert and two unidentified companions, who last night shot and killed Albert Heiske, 35, a bootlegger's war of long standing is, according to Herske's friends, the cause of the trouble among the men.

CHINESE-AMERICAN RELATIONS TALKED
AT UNOFFICIAL MEETPeople of Orient Said to be Critical Over Existing Treaties

Baltimore, Sept. 18—(AP)—Charles R. Crane, former U. S. minister to China, presiding at last night's opening session of the unofficial conference on Chinese-American relations, related a story once told him for former President Hsu of China wherein a Chinese gentleman, walking home late at night, found a robber digging under a wall. He paused to watch him sympathetically, finally advising him that he was wasting his time—where he dug led only to the well.

"How do you know so much about this house?" inquired the robber.

"Oh, it is my house."

"That is what Europe has been doing for a great many years," the session chairman declared, "and the people inside the wall are beginning to take notice. They have been very considerate and kind for a long time, but they are beginning to feel as though they had had nearly enough of this digging under the wall."

Chinese are Critical.

Dr. Sao Ke Aldred Szee, Chinese minister to the United States, declared in the principal address of the evening that the opinion of the Chinese people regarding the now existing treaties was highly critical.

"The Chinese development of China," he said, "will make for peace if only because the whole of Chinese culture rests on a belief in the power and appeal of moral force. We hold material force so meanly that the soldier is the lowest order of our social hierarchy. And this valuation will remain unchanged, so long as the Chinese people are allowed to progress and develop along the lines of their national genius."

Dr. P. W. Kuo named the boycott as "one thing that China has learned to do well," and declared that "China may perhaps be driven against her wish to follow the example of Japan and make herself strong in arms unless in coming negotiations, she is not given as sympathetic a hearing as she deserves."

Fifth Session Business
School Monday Evening

The fifth session of the business and salesmanship school held under the auspices of the Dixon Chamber of Commerce and under the personal direction of Professor Edw. H. Gardner of the University of Wisconsin will be held in the City Hall next Monday night at 7:30.

The attendance at the school is growing all the time and now that the vacations are over, there is little doubt but what there will be the largest attendance at this meeting of any of those held in the past. All who are attending the meetings are enthusiastic as they realize that they are gaining knowledge in the art of salesmanship, things that they can apply every day in assisting the public.

Professor Gardner, at this session will continue his talk on "Knowing Your Goods," and this is possibly one of the most important things that any one engaged in business must know. In order to meet the demands of the buying public, a salesman must be in a position to give all the information possible about the goods he is offering for sale.

Its president is Robert E. Speer of New York, secretary of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions since 1891, and its office in Washington is headed by Bishop W. F. FORMER CHIEF
OF IRISH ARMY
ROTTEN EGGEDGen. Mulcahy Mobbed on His Arrival in
New York City

New York, Sept. 18—(AP)—Having been welcomed to the United States by a mob of Irish republican sympathizers who hurled rotten eggs, tomatoes and sticks, General Richard Mulcahy, former commander of the Irish Free State army, and four companions are here on their way to the inter-parliamentary union at Washington.

The general and his party were attacked by surprise last night when they disembarked from the liner President Roosevelt at Hoboken. Punched in the face and kicked on the legs, Mulcahy was almost knocked from his feet before he left the gang plank.

The dock police were powerless. Several eggs and tomatoes hit the general. One of his party was gashed above the eye by a stick. Others were severely pummeled.

A riot call finally brought police reinforcements.

Three men and two women were arrested.

Part of the crowd collected about Hoboken police headquarters where the prisoners were taken. A woman explained that they had planned a "pink tea" for the general and wanted to have a horse ready but the ship came in 20 hours ahead of schedule.

Other Irish delegations to the inter-parliamentary union arriving with General Mulcahy were Michael Hayes, speaker of the Dail; Thomas Johnson, leader of the Irish party; Patrick McGilgan, minister of commerce and Sir Thomas G. Esmond-Hart.

State Department Will Not Admit Saklatvala

Washington, Sept. 18—(AP)—Despite the contention of Senator Borah at Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, and others that the utterances of Sharpuji Saklatvala, who sought admission to this country as a delegate to the inter-parliamentary union here next month, gave no adequate grounds for his exclusion, department officials are satisfied that they do.

Not only are they not disposed to reconsider Saklatvala's case but it has been made plain that the department will rigidly exclude henceforth any individuals who publicly support views favoring the overthrow of government by force.

London, Sept. 18—(AP)—It was officially denied today that the British government had any connection whatever with the exclusion from the United States of Sharpuji Saklatvala, communist member of the Commons, whose passport visa as a member of the British delegation to the inter-parliamentary union conference in Washington was revoked on Wednesday by Secretary of State Kellogg.

DEFEAT LAYMEN'S PLEA

Beardstown, Ill., Sept. 18—(AP)—Defeat of the proposal to admit laymen to full conference rights and passage of the resolution urging the union of the Methodist Episcopal Church with the Methodist Church South, marked today's session of the Illinois conference of the Methodist church being held here.

Two other major business items remain to be acted on Saturday. One of these is the vote on the new preachers pension and relief fund plan which according to present indications, will be killed. The other is the vote on the resolution giving ministers of the conference, a minimum salary of $1,500.

The proposal to join the two branches of the Methodist church was unanimously carried by a vote of 184 to 0. A number of ministers refrained from voting however. The action is entirely advisory and is being taken at every church conference as a guide for action of the general conference next year.

On the question of admitting laymen to the right to vote at conference sessions, there was a considerable division of opinion, despite the absence of debate. The vote was 126 to 60. Dr. Walter Tate, of Decatur read the resolution and Edgar J. Page of the Rock River conference spoke for the measure.

DISCREPANCY IN EVIDENCE GIVEN
IN FRAUD TRIALMuch Interest Shown in Trial of Former County Judge

Woodstock, Ill., Sept. 18—(AP)—Clam fishing and politics both are discussed by McHenry county people in connection with the trial of County Judge Charles F. Barnes and V. S. Lumley, former state's attorney of McHenry county, charged with conspiracy and perjury. The prosecution alleges that Judge Barnes and the former state's attorney engineered the conviction of Fremont Hoy, aged banker of McHenry and Ringwood, and his son, Clarence, two years ago on charges that they defrauded Truman Abbott.

The testimony of Abbott, a retired farmer, the reading of which was begun yesterday, from the records of the Hoy trial was resumed today. Fremont Hoy, who with his son was brought back from prison to testify, completed his testimony yesterday. The transcript of evidence of the Hoy trial showed that Abbott at first denied having signed a paper purporting to have been an agreement with the Hoy family for disposal of trust deeds. Abbott swore the Hoy family, without authority, sold the trust deeds which he had deposited with them. Confronted with the paper he disowned the signature, but afterward testified that if he had signed it, he had done so without knowledge of its meaning.

McHenry county residents recalled that the defendant Lumley is a brother-in-law of Fremont Hoy's half-brother. It still is a subject of debate in connection with the fresh water pearl fishery stories that figured in the Hoy's trial whether the bankers actually believed that clams could be inculturated with and made to yield pearls at a profit in Illinois.

The chief defense counsel, D. R. Joslyn, was a primary opponent of his client, Judge Barnes when Lumley stepped between them and took the republican nomination for state's attorney.

NEWS FROM DIXON

Toastmasters' Board Plans Winter's Work

Last night the Board of Directors of the Dixon Toastmasters Club met at the Y. M. C. A. to make plans for the club activities for the coming winter. From the interest shown by the board and from the many enquiries from prospective members this coming season promises to be a very busy year in every way for this young club of business men.

Although the club is young it claims an enrollment at the present time of over fifty members which makes it the second strongest club of its kind in Dixon.

The first meeting for this season will be next Thursday, September 24 at 8:15 p. m. At that meeting many important changes in the club policies will be discussed and it is expected that every member will be present. At last night's meeting of the board, A. H. Lancaster was appointed to represent the club on the committee for safety week in conjunction with members from other civic organizations, and which is being fostered by the Chicago Motor League.

Physical Director at State Meeting Today
E. A. Snapp physical director for the local "Y" left this morning for Bloomington, where he will be a delegate to the State Physical Directors Association. He will return Saturday evening.

Volley Ball Saturday Night Will be Feature
Tomorrow is Volley Ball night at the "Y". Last week the gym floor was well filled and every man claimed that he would be before the net at five bells again this Saturday. During this hot spell there is nothing so refreshing as a good work out on the gym floor followed by a good shower or swim in the pool. This hour is the same—five o'clock. Starting next week Mr. Snapp will start regular classes for those men who wish to begin in physical exercise and volleyball.

Ladies' Auxiliary Will Meet Monday Afternoon
Monday afternoon the ladies' auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. will meet in the parlors at 3 o'clock. This is the first meeting of this year and the president is preparing an outline of activities for the auxiliary for the coming year, which she will bring up for discussion. Any lady interested in the welfare of the Dixon "Y" is not only eligible but is invited to attend these meetings and to become a member.

JUST WHAT YOU NEED, MEN!
From Saturday, Sept. 19th until further notice I will give free a Du-Hold Belt with every suit order. These belts are just what you need. They are very comfortable, they hold the trousers up and the shirt in its proper place. Come in and examine it. You will be delighted. Prices on suits or overcoats lower than elsewhere. Order a suit now and get one of these dandy belts absolutely free.

HER OWN FAULT—

The train was about to start when the door of a compartment containing a solitary commercial traveler was flung open and a young woman entered and dropped into a corner seat.

After a while the traveler said, politely: "Excuse me, miss, but—"

"If you speak or annoy me I'll pull the communication cord," snapped the girl.

The train rolled on, and after a lengthy pause the young man made another attempt to speak, but again the girl threatened to give the alarm.

At last the train slowed up at a station and the traveler rose to his feet.

"I don't care whether you like it or not," he said, "but I want that bag of strawberries you've been sitting on for the last six miles."

Happy Surprise

Monday Evening

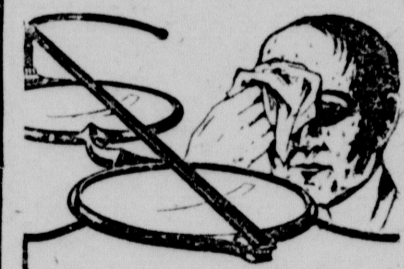

On Monday evening despite the rain, the officers of Rebekah lodge, No. 423, called at the home of Mrs. Henry Abt and surprised her. She answered the bell, expecting Mr. Abt from Polo, but instead a company of seventeen friends greeted her. It was such a complete and jolly surprise that everyone enjoyed it thoroughly. The evening was spent in playing five hundred, Mrs. Charles Herrick winning the first prize for ladies, and Mrs. John Herman the consolation prize. Mr. Muzzy won the first prize for gentlemen and Mr. Herman the consolation prize. The officers presented Mrs. Abt, who is conductor for 1925, with a beautiful silver spoon, which is very much appreciated by her. The ladies in the company brought with them delicious refreshments in preparation for a good time, and according to all reports everyone had an evening of much enjoyment, all being leath to say "good night."

EASTERN STAR PARLOR CLUB

PICNIC LUNCHEON—
The members of Dorothy Chapter, O. E. S., will enjoy a picnic luncheon at 1 o'clock Monday at Masonic hall with a meeting afterward. Each member is requested to take their own sandwiches, dishes, silver and one other dish for the luncheon.

ENTERTAINED CLUB—
Mrs. Oscar Cline entertained the members of the L. H. E. club at her home Wednesday, a picnic dinner at noon being followed by an afternoon of chat and music. The affair was a happy one for the participants.

What Your Eyes Would Say if They Could Talk

I am your eyes, the best friend you have. Take care of me; protect me; assist me. If I had properly prescribed glasses I would not tire; I would not blur; I would cease rubbing your heart, lungs, liver, stomach and kidneys of nervous energy which they need to perform their functions properly that you may have the vitality you need to keep you well and protect you against disease; I would impart new vigor to you and make you enjoy life better.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—
Orange juice, cereal, thin cream, French toast, syrup, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—
Baked spinach and tomatoes, raisin bread, peach tapioca pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—
Casserole of chicken, rice potatoes, succotash, peach salad, junket ice cream, sponge cake, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

Luncheons for children who hurry home from school must be nourishing, quickly eaten and easily digested. If a child eats his luncheon in haste with the fear of "tardiness" in his mind his food will do him less good than if he is served a simpler meal that he can enjoy in peace.

Baked Spinach and Tomatoes.
Two pounds spinach, 4 tomatoes, 1/2 onion (minced), 1 teaspoon sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 1/2 cup fine dried bread crumbs, 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons buttered crumbs, 2 tablespoons grated cheese.

Wash spinach and cook in its own juice. Chop very fine. Peel tomatoes and cut in slices. Put a layer of dried crumbs into a well-buttered baking dish. Cover a layer of tomatoes, sprinkle with onion, salt, pepper and sugar and dot with butter. Add a layer of spinach. Begin with dried crumbs and again continue layer for layer with seasoning until all is used. Cover with buttered crumbs, sprinkle with cheese and bake 25 minutes in a moderately hot oven. Serve from the dish in which it was baked.

Excellent Address At Bethel Church

For more than one hour the people listened with marked attention to Rev. McCarrell's address on "The Church that Did Not Close," at the Bible Conference Wednesday evening at Bethel United Evangelical church. The attendance was very encouraging and the singing was inspiring.

It is the story of a small suburban church not far from Chicago, and how it solved its problems and became a power for God in the community. It had been badly run down, in debt, the attendance small, and the majority of its members had advised closing up and sellin gthe property. There were two deacons, however, who argued that the church ought to be maintained for the sake of the small Sunday school. Wm. McCarrell, a student at the Moody Bible Institute was invited to supply the pulpit for a Sunday. He had an audience of twenty-five in the morning and fifteen in the evening. Previous to that time eight had been an excellent attendance. So much interest was manifested in his strong Biblical messages that he was called as pastor, and for three months was paid five dollars a week for his service.

He has served that church for twelve or thirteen years and today the membership is about five hundred; the Sunday school maintains an average attendance of over 500; prayer meeting attendance, 150 to 200; and a popular Bible class on Friday nights is well attended. Two branch missions are supported and the church is active in many other lines of missionary work. Conversations constantly occur and the membership is growing rapidly. At least ninety-five per cent of the children and youths carry their Bibles with them to the preaching services.

For seven years the pastor has not needed to give a talk in his mid-week prayer meeting, the service being filled to overflowing with prayer, praise and testimony. The church had not had a prayer meeting for years until it started one with two men besides the pastor.

The story of this church has been printed in the form of a tract and it has been revised several times to bring it up to date. At one time 70,000 copies were sent out into many different parts of the world and it has been attended with wonderful blessing.

This evening Rev. McCarrell will speak on "Christ in Colossians." The message will present many lesson that will have a practical application to present conditions in Christendom. On Friday evening he will speak on "Christ in the Gospel of St. John."

A strong team of workers, representing the Fishermen's club, will arrive on Saturday or early on Sunday morning and they will take part in the interesting services that will be held on Sunday. Bishop W. F. Hell will arrive on Friday and he will preach on Sunday at 10:45 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. A large attendance is expected.

Howard Berglund and Carl Hess brought a special message in song last evening. Mr. Berglund has charge of the singing. The evening meetings begin at 7:45 o'clock. There is great blessing in store for those who will visit the sessions of the conference.

Auxiliaries Good Work Reported

The American Legion Auxiliary, Dixon Post No. 12, held a very well attended meeting in G. A. R. hall Wednesday afternoon. The ladies were pleased that Mrs. Stevens, the president, was able to preside once more. The usual business was disposed of, and the floor given to the delegates' report. The American Legion Auxiliary held their fifth annual convention at Quincy, Ill., Aug. 31 and Sept. 1st. This was the largest Legion auxiliary convention ever held. There are 425 units and 13355 members in the state. Alton has the largest unit, their membership being 213. The amount of money raised by the women of the auxiliaries this year in Illinois is as follows:

Rehabilitation, $36,364.37.
Child Welfare, $2,108.25.
Green House at Edward Hines, Jr., Hospital at Maywood, $4,308.35.
Orphans' Billett at Otter Lake, Mich., $679.21.

This latter place is a national home for orphans of World War men. All states paid their per capita for this. At Normal, Ill., is a home where 96 World War orphans are cared for by the Legion Auxiliary; at St. Vincent's in Freeport are five children being cared for.

Fifteen disabled service men die every day on an average, as a direct result of their war service. The number of orphans is increasing. There is no government provision for the care of these unfortunate children. Twenty-eight hundred potted plants were taken to the men in hospitals at Easter; thousands of dozens of eggs, many dozens of homemade cookies, many pounds of candy and unlimited cartons of cigarets were sent to the boys in hospitals. Grape juice and ginger ale have been found very beneficial for the tubercular patients and the auxiliaries are sending both of these, also.

The American Legion Auxiliary was organized and dedicated to the spirit of service. So long as we contribute to the happiness or comfort of others, we are of importance in the world and no longer. "Not our plans, but our part in God's plan for others."

Waitress, Then Chorus Girl, Now Bride-to-be

Chicago, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Ruby Lynn, pretty waitress of Litchfield, Ill., whose pert repartee to former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, that she had been "kidded by experts" put her on the front page of the newspaper and then to the front row of the chorus, is to be married next Christmas. Her intended is James H. Trafford, an English attorney now practicing in New York.

Several years ago, when Mr. Lewis was in Litchfield, during a political campaign, he complimented the young woman on the way she served ham and eggs and received the reply that ran across the country.

Practical Club in First Meeting

The Practical Club held the first meeting of the year Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lester Street. A short business session was held after which the program opened with a very interesting and well written paper, entitled "Women in Politics," by Mrs. Charles Keyes, which was a review of recent happenings in politics of especial interest to women. Then followed "Vacation Experiences," given in answer to roll call which proved most entertaining. Alice, little daughter of Mrs. Street sweetly played two violin solos, "The Hunting Song," and for an encore, "The Cradle Song," after which the ladies enjoyed a social chat and delicious refreshments. Mrs. Edward Dawson was a guest of the club for the afternoon.

Pretty Wedding in Amboy Parsonage

The Methodist parsonage of Amboy was the scene of a pretty wedding last Friday when the lives of Harriet C. Tait and Harry W. Dickson were united in holy wedlock. Rev. M. D. Bayly officiated at the ceremony. The bride was attired in a tan canton crepe dress, trimmed in embroidery ered lace and wore hat and slippers matching. Mrs. Dickson, the daughter of Mrs. Mary Tait, is well known in Amboy. She attended the local high school after which she spent two years at the Rockford hospital, training for a nurse.

The groom is a son of Rev. John W. Dickson of Frankfort, Ind. He is an expert accountant and at present is in the service of the government. The newlyweds will make their home in Indianapolis, Ind., where Mr. Dickson is employed.

Know Your Merchant by the Furniture He Sells

Home makers today have the privilege of choosing between modern styles and recreations of the great periods: French, English, Italian and Spanish. Much might be said in favor of each style. The important things are to satisfy your individual preference and match the spirit of your rooms.

Your search for distinction, regardless of your choice in design, leads naturally to furniture by Karpen. In it you will find the taste and skill of five generations of cabinet makers reflected in a perfection of line and harmony of color. And beneath this surface beauty you will find something seldom found in books on home decorations. Though you cannot see it, no other quality in furniture is of greater importance. This is comfort, luxurious and lasting.

The weight and resilience of the springs, the materials used for cushions, the width and strength of the supporting webbing, the perfection of every hidden detail—these determine the degree of luxury and the length of life in upholstered pieces.

You cannot rip off the covering to study this inside construction. There is only one way to be sure it is right. Find the name plate of a responsible maker.

Every piece that bears a Karpen nameplate has back of it nearly a half century of honest furniture manufacture. Karpen could not afford to mark any piece that was not right in every detail.

Knowing this, buyers choose more of Karpen furniture than of any other make in the world. This volume has brought about economies in large scale buying and production which enables Karpen to give you a greater measure of worth for every dollar than any other maker.

Golf Notes

The monthly cup tournament was well attended and well played. The weather was ideal for golf and play was close. With very few exceptions, all matches went to the eighth or ninth greens. Fred Paine eliminated J. S. Archer who held the cup, Ralph Carnahan and A. A. Angliemier, in order to get into the finals. L. D. Miller eliminated Dr. Fleming, L. M. Corwin and Ralph Thompson on his way to the finals. Paine and Miller playing in the final round saw-sawed back and forth and were even at the end of seven holes. Paine won the eighth hole and Miller won the ninth with a par, leaving the match all square. On the tenth, Paine's drive landed on the green and he made the hole in par, winning the cup.

Four different men have won the cup this summer and the cup is to be given to the one winning it most often. In the event of a tie, a special eighteen hole match will be played.

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service

Every business man appreciates the importance of an inventory. It is a good business principle to make an inventory at regular intervals in order to find out the true state of one's stock.

This principle of ascertaining the actual state of affairs at regular intervals is as applicable to the preservation of personal health as it is to the preservation and conduct of business.

The earliest recognition of a health liability will enable you to take the proper steps to arrest or cure the physical liabilities which your health inventory may disclose.

You know that many diseases begin slowly or insidiously and may not produce any disabling symptoms until the condition is considerably advanced. By means of a thorough physical examination at regular intervals such diseases may be recognized and their progress checked or cured by proper hygienic, dietetic, medical or surgical treatment.

Tuberculosis, cancer, Bright's disease, diabetes, hardening of the arteries and certain forms of heart disease are examples of diseases that may begin unnoticed.

To your physician, trained to note the slightest symptom of disorder, the beginning of these diseases is at once apparent if you present yourself for an annual physical examination.

Annual Examination Is Advisable

The practice of annual physical examinations is valuable not only for the early detection of disease but also it is important as a guide in the selection of suitable employment for those with known defects.

If you subject yourself to a physical examination and discover that you have defective vision, heart disease or Bright's disease, and are manifestly unfitted for the type of work which you are doing, it may be possible for you, with this knowledge, to change your work in such a way as to be of material benefit to your health.

Industrial firms have found the method of annual physical examinations exceedingly useful in the proper placing of employees and many have noted the reduction in accidents since this plan was inaugurated.

Your body will stand a great deal of neglect and bad treatment when you are young but as you grow older you will certainly pay the price of neglect.

Can't Replace Parts of Your Body

Remember that you differ from your automobile to this extent: A damaged or a cracked cylinder may be replaced, leaky valves may be ground, spare parts may be purchased, but you cannot buy a new stomach, a new liver, or a new set of lungs.

Apply business methods to the care of your human mechanism. Take an annual inventory.

Have a complete annual physical examination made by a thoroughly qualified physician to detect the early signs of any developing disease.

If you follow these suggestions you will feel better, live longer and accomplish more.

There is no use in your going to the scrap heap before your time if you will have yourself overhauled by a physician at least once a year.

If you inspect your automobile four times a year give your human mechanism at least one-fourth of the attention you give your car.

Good Thoughts for Good People

Almost everyone will admit that the greatest obstacle to the realization of true relationship is selfishness. Men have been so largely seeking their own good, striving for their own advantage, giving comparatively so little thought to the needs and desires of others, that a true sense of kinship has been sadly lacking in human affairs. Selfishness as a deterrent to harmonious associations is quite readily discerned, and every Christian will acknowledge that to practice the Golden Rule is the way to overcome the difficulty.

As ships meet at sea—a moment together, when words of greeting must be spoken, and then away upon the deep—so men meet in this world, and I think we should cross no man's path without hailing him, and if he needs, giving him supplies.

Did You Ever Stop to Think—

BY E. R. Waite, Secretary, Shawnee, Okla. Board of Commerce

Rudolph Spreckels, President of the United Bank and Trust Company of San Francisco, says:

THAT the cost of refunding of railroad bonds bears directly upon the question of high freight rates.

THAT if the American public realized the advantage that would result from a more permanent method of financing our railroads, they would buy railroad debentures as readily as bonds with a fixed maturity.

THAT unless freight rates are sufficiently low to enable the producers to move and sell their produce profitably, there can be no real or lasting prosperity.

THAT many railroads have been bankrupted through bad management and because scheming interests grow rich on reorganization profits.

UNLESS A SQUARE DEAL POLICY BE SPEEDILY ADOPTED BY ALL THOSE CONNECTED WITH OUR RAILROADS AND THEIR FINANCING, PUBLIC OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION WOULD SEEM TO OFFER THE ONLY SOLUTION FOR OUR TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS.

Every subscriber to the Dixon Telegraph should have one of our accident insurance policies. Price $1.50 and you are insured for $25000 for one year.

The following ladies have returned to their home from the Angear hospital with their babies: Mrs. W. R. Kent of Colony, Kas., Mrs. Roy T. Deasch of Mendota and Mrs. Andrew Roberts of Princeton.

Quite a bit of damage was done in the town and vicinity last Thursday night by a wind storm. Trees and poles were broken down, wires were twisted and windmills were wrecked and some buildings damaged by the twister. In many places the corn was blown flat on the ground.

Owing to the rain part of the Gala day program Tuesday was halted. The music by the Amboy band and the baseball game were postponed until a later date. However, the ladies served the supper at the Catholic hall and a dance was held in the evening at the Armory hall, both of which were well attended.

Leo Lauer is enjoying a trip to Denver and Colorado Springs. Mrs. Lauer and children are staying at the Phillip Clarke home.

LETTER FROM MELVILLE SARTORIS TO LESLIE PRESCOTT

It was rather confusing to find so many of those little statuettes, when I thought there were probably only five couple in the world—at least I have only known of four couple and a half that have been accounted for. But they make everything nowadays by wholesale, especially in the movies, and they have such wonderful artists! It seems that Miss Perier went to one of the artists that work on her lot and he made the statues first in plaster of Paris and then molded them in silver. It's the way of the world I expect; either the thing that fascinates you or entertains you or fills your emotions is repeated so many times that all the romance is extracted from the original; or else it is touted and talked about so much that you come to regard it as very cheap.

Do you know I am beginning to think that my quest, which I thought so full of romance, so unique—which I thought had almost a tinge of Sir Galahad—is rather banal. But unfortunately, when I once make up my mind to do a thing, it is almost impossible for me to unmake it. If I were never to hold that little jade woman in my hand, I know I should have an unsated desire as long as I should live. So I'm going on this time, where you'll not be able to find me with a letter or telegram.

Don't think that I was not overjoyed to get that one; but you can never write me another as you did that, for in the meantime you know how I feel toward you.

I'm very glad, lady dear, that you did not get the letter I sent you before you found out that I had stopped in Los Angeles. If you had, of course I would never have received a message; if you had, I should have been heartbroken to have received a message. Now I have a message that you have sent me to read over and over—something I never hoped to have—and yet I haven't lost one of my illusions or dreams about you. You are still my Madonna of the Snows.

By the way, my dear Leslie, I enjoyed my party in Los Angeles much more than I expected, for Miss Perier, when she heard me remark that I knew you, spent the rest of the evening eulogizing you. According to her, you are a woman divinely human, and humanely divine. She says you have a sympathy as wide as want, and like the heaven above, it bends over a pleading world.

That's an exquisite way to put it, Leslie. I would have said that you had an interest in everything and everybody, and I would have added that understanding human nature so well, you know what few of us ever will acknowledge, that no man or woman is wholly bad.

Most of us want our heroes sans peur et sans reproche, and almost all of us, I think, want our villains to have horns and tails and a cloven foot.

That you do not want this, that you do not think that humanity is either wholly good or wholly bad, is perhaps your greatest charm for me, because whether you know it or not, my dear, my reputations is, if not black, decidedly speckled.

THE LIMITED MAIL

by ELMER E. VANCE
Novel by William Basil Courtney

Copyright, 1925, Warner Bros.
"THE LIMITED MAIL" with Monte Blue, is a dramatization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

At the foot of a railroad trestle in Granite Gorge, in the Rockies, two vagabonds are cooking their evening meal, a "hobo stew," over a rude fire. One of the men is Potts, a professor only 25 years of age, is almost a stranger to his companion. The two hear a shrill whistle, followed by the appearance of "Spike" Nelson, a typical hobo, who boasts that he is "de toughest 'bo on two dogs." It is night and a heavy rain is falling.

"Sit down by the fire and toast yourself, Spike," invited Potts unceremoniously, "while my young friend and I procure three cans for the serving of our banquet."

"Ain't dis weather fierce?" complained Spike, spitting into the fire as he settled on his haunches beside it.

"Ruskin," Potts reminded him politely, trying to belie his own bodily discomfort, "said 'there is no such thing as bad weather; only different kinds of good weather.' Snow is exhilarating, rain is refreshing."

"Rust Can?" interrupted Spike. "What's his mark like? Did he ever burn on dis route in de rain—betcha nix!" Spike, with a gurgling chuckle as he discovered the roasting potatoes, speared one from the flames with his steel hand. Without removing it from the spike, and unmindful of its heat, he started to gouge it—skin, ashes and all.

The faint and distant whistle of a train shivered eerily down the boisterous lanes of the storm.

A sudden crash and jar behind them shook the rails and ground.

"The Limited Mail's coming!" exclaimed Potts, with all the awesome respect of the free riding gentry for a railroad masterpiece. Then, wagging his head and squinting, he judged expertly, "She ought to pass here in twenty minutes. I wish I were riding her rods to Crater City tonight!"

Spike glanced sarcastically at Potts' bilklike figure. "If dat belly keeps on growin' you won't be able to squeeze in on de rods much longer, Professor!"

Potts folded his hands over his paunch and sighed in a hopefully faraway manner; "When the day comes that the natural growth of my maturing figure prevents me from indulging my fondest passion in life I shall retire to a shanty beside the tracks in some Arcadian pass, where I can hear the beloved song of the rails and commune poetically with Nature!"

"Is this Limited Mail the Transrockian's best train?" asked Bob irrelevantly.

"Yep," answered Spike, with ulterior enthusiasm, "She's dere pride and joy. It's de ambish of every engineer on de road to drive her. An' he added darkly, "she'd be great pickin' in a stick-up with all dat registered mail she carries!"

The involuntary start of distaste that Bob made at this random suggestion did not escape Spike, who, regarding him with the oily steadfastness of a black spider, sneered,

"Guess you ain't been at dis game long, 'bo—an' I'm too much of a gent ter ask questions. But lemme tell you, boy, de sooner you fall in step with us wise uns de better off you'll be. An' we tink like dis—don't ever pass up no chances ter make a strike, 'cause what in hell's de use of—anything!"

"What's the use of—anything!"

echoed Potts with an added and more meaningful depth of the philosophic resignation of vagabondage that more than made up for the profanity he had omitted.

Bob, remaining silent, found himself growing tight and numb inside. "Gather 'round the festive board, gentle knights—make merry at the wassail bowl!" chanted Potts, ceremoniously handing an empty salmon can to Spike.

"Gee," said Spike, trembling in his animal greed as he bent over the stew can to help himself, "I'm famished. Ain't had a bite since yesterday!"

"The same holds true of my young friend and myself," said Potts, crowding up with Spike and rolling his eyes expansively. "Come, Bob, why do you hang back?"

Their long day of fast, and the marrow-weakening chill of the night wind and the rain, made food a desperate need of these poor wayfarers. It was a most unkind Old Witch, therefore, that with seeming maliciousness waited until the very moment when they were about to begin eating to drop a fragment of rock into the center of their fire, knocking over the stew can. Unminded by the men in the eagerness of their appetites a thin film of debris, presaging a slide, had begun—even before the tragedy of the stew can—toward the base of the trestle pier, in the bottom of the funnel like declivity far under the tracks.

A boulder shot down through the darkness—then another—and another.

With a wail of agonized disappointment Potts reached to save what might be left of the stew in the overturned can, but a bouncing stone sent can and fire careening over the cliff. The scattered embers streaked into the black abyss like a brief scurry of frightened meteorites—then darkness, thick and dangerous, closed around the imperilled hoboes.

"Climb for the tracks, but keep under the trestle!" shouted Potts, feeling his way around the concrete pier and scrambling upwards. Spike and Bob fought hastily up beside him. It was touch and go, with bone-crushing death whizzing past their heads on wings of stone. Miraculously, they were able to escape from the bottom of the funnel to the wider and comparatively safer space high up, just beneath the tracks, without being hit.

Below them went on the curdling roar and chaos of the landslide. Stray boulders, shooting down on wild tangents, came uncomfortably close.

Potts' strength gave out as he neared the tracks, and he suddenly started to slide back toward the grinding disaster below. Bob, barely feeling the brush of Potts' body as he coasted by, braced himself and grabbed his friend; then with difficulty dragged him to the safety of the tracks, which Spike had already gained.

Breathing hard, the three hoboes stood indecisive in the storm. Lightning gave snatches of vision and Bob, looking down, saw that the slide had stopped at last, without, seemingly doing material harm to the trestle anchorage, although a mass of debris was cluttered against it, on the slopes of the funnel. The Old Witch had at last grown tired of the grotesque and restless human birds of flight who for so many seasons had nested beneath her granite pinions!

"That's twice tonight you've saved me, my—friend!" Potts gasped, with an emphasis on the last word that brought to Bob's face, though it was hidden by the darkness, the first genuine smile he had displayed since casting his lot with the fat hobo.

"Can de weeps an' let's git outen here!" warned Spike, starting away from the trestle, down the curve around the Old Witch's nose.

Thus far, the slide seemed to have been confined to the interior thigh of the Old Witch, but a sudden crash and jar behind them that shook the rails and ground and almost threw the tramps from their feet, brought them to a frightened halt. Bob started to run back to seek confirmation of his worst fears, but a flash of lightning made it unnecessary for him to proceed far, for it revealed, to the wide-eyed tramps, a large boulder squarely on the trestle tracks, directly in the path of the oncoming Limited.

Canadian Made Airplane

Trip Through Yukon Dist.

Edmonton, Alberta, Sept. 18.—(Canadian Press)—George Platzer, who with his three sons, left Wrangell, Alaska, June 1, aboard a 450 horsepower seaplane, has returned here after an aerial prospecting trip through the Yukon and northern British Columbia, which covered the Dease Lake and other new mineral fields. By plane, canoe and on foot, Platzer said, the party covered nearly ten thousand miles.

No forced landings were necessary.

Fuel for the plane had been taken into the country by Indians and cached as far as the Coal and Highland rivers.

In the Dease lake field, Platzer said, the miners are doing well and the majority of the claims will require considerable more working.

He declared the reported tropical valleys of northern British Columbia are actualities.

PIRATES LEADING GIANTS BY SEVEN FULL GAMES NOW

Senators' Advantage in American is Half a Game Over That

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Pirates are now leading the National League flag race by seven games and the Senators are in front in the American League scramble by seven and one half contests.

Ray Kremer limited the Braves to seven bingles while his teammates rolled up 13 hits for an 11-2 verdict yesterday, gaining half a game, as the Giants were not scheduled.

The Phillies met with a 5-2 defeat in opening a series at Cincinnati, Mays beating Ring in a pitching duel.

After Walter Johnson fell victim to the Tigers in the first part of a double header by 12-9, Stanley Coveleskie twirled the Senators to a 1-0 victory in the piece which was called on account of darkness in the sixth inning.

It was Johnson's seventh defeat and Covey's 15th victory of the season.

The Red Sox weakened the Browns' hold on third place by handing them a double shutout, 3-0 and 4-0. As the Bengals drew an even break with the Griffins, Detroit edged to within one and one half games of the third rung.

Quinn held the White Sox to seven hits while the Mackmen turned out a 6-3 victory in the final lineup of the clubs this season. In their series with Chicago, the Athletics have won 14 games and lost 8.

With Henry Johnson, Florida rookie in the box, the Yankees won the final game of a series from the Indians, 5-0. It was the third straight victory for the Yankees over Cleveland and in the season's play the Hugs have won 12 of 22 games from the Speaker tribe.

Carl Mays, submarine twirler, pitched his second full game of the year for the Reds and turned back the Phillies in handy fashion.

Only Americans Remain in Tennis Tournament

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—With stars of France, Spain, Australia and Japan eliminated, only America's big four were left today in the tournament for the national tennis championship.

William T. Tilden, Philadelphia; Vincent Richards, New York; R. Norris Williams of Philadelphia and William M. Johnston of San Francisco. Three of them were in the semi-finals a year ago.

Williams, the season's sensational comeback, will today endeavor to block the path of Johnston to his eighth appearance in the final round. In the other half of the draw, Tilden and Richards will renew the struggle which they had a year ago when the champion eliminated his youthful rival in five hard fought sets.

ELEMENTS AIDING COACHES PREPARE TEAMS FOR GAMES

Heat Takes Off Flesh and Rain Softens Playing Fields

Chicago, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Elements are aiding Midwest football coaches to shape the season's grid machines.

Heat that has replaced Jerseys with gym shirts in some of the western conference camps is welcomed by mentors as a trimmer of superfluous poundage, while rain that has softened fields elsewhere is saving many a bump and bruise at the outset of practice.

But neither sunshine nor showers bring succor to the gloomy forebodings of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's grid general. He hopes only for a "fairly good defensive combination worked out for the Army game" to which he is pointing his hussies.

DAILY AVERAGE NET PAID CIRCULATION OF THE DIXON EVENING TELEGRAPH

There are over 6,700 homes in Dixon and this trade territory served each day by the Telegraph—that means that about 30,000 people receive and read The Telegraph each day. Certainly a wonderfully large field for alert advertisers to cultivate intensively—regularly—daily.

Doesn't It Sound Reasonable

Since people read The Evening Telegraph every day, and

People read Evening Telegraph advertising every day and

People buy merchandise every day,

Why isn't it good business to advertise every day?

Or, at least, to advertise more frequently and persistently?

If every day is a good day to try to sell goods, then

All days are good days to advertise your store—your service—your merchandise.

Evening Telegraph advertising will reach those new customers.

MAY SEYMOUR FOOT LOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON
SEQUEL TO "The FLAPPER WIFE"

CONEA

THE STORY SO FAR:

MAY SEYMOUR, whose husband, DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, killed himself because of her love affair with another man, returns to her home town a year's absence. She sells her property and with her whole tiny fortune in cash sets out to find and marry a man with money.

At Atlantic City she meets HERBERT WATERBURY through a divorcee, MRS. CARLOTTA FROTHINGHAM. Believing Waterbury to be rich, May sets her cap for him. When he proposes, she accepts him and turns over to him all her money for investment. Immediately he disappears—and the money with him!

Penniless, May sells her diamonds to buy a railroad ticket to California, where Carlotta has a bungalow in the Los Altos hills. On the way she stops off in her home town to visit her friends, DICK and GLORIA GREGORY.

There she meets ULYSSES FORGAN, a wealthy widower. He falls in love with May and asks her to marry him. But she refuses, explaining that she likes him too much to marry him without love.

Then she goes on to Los Altos, but finds herself an unwelcome guest in Carlotta's home when she fails to pay her board. May wires Forgan for money to bring her home, and she settles herself with the Gregorays for the winter.

On Christmas day the Gregorays have a party, at which Ulysses and his daughter, Sally, are guests. He points out to May that she has no right to "live on" the Gregorays, who haven't much money—and that she'll never be happy until she learns not only to take care of herself but to serve others as well.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

MAY sat looking straight ahead of her for a long time. Her eyes smarted with angry tears that kept gathering faster than she could blink them away.

But under her anger she felt, somehow, what Ulysses had just said to her was the truth about herself.

He had shown her just what she was as plainly as if he had held a mirror up before her eyes for her to see herself. . . . She looked back over her life and couldn't see a single place where she had done the unselfish thing instead of the selfish one.

She had married Dr. John for money and had ruined his life. During the 10 years she had lived with him she had never considered him for a minute. She had gone about to "twirl" parties with any man who happened along, and she had been drunk, and danced like a butterfly in the sun—without a thought of anything but her own pleasure.

She had refused to bear a child, although Dr. John had made it perfectly plain that in his code of life marriage without children was no marriage at all.

She had lived upon his bounty and given him nothing in return . . . she had been a grafter . . . a cheap grafter.

And now she was "sponging" upon the Gregorays in the same fashion, so Ulysses said. And Ulysses was right!

. . . But the fact that he was right made May feel all the more bitter toward him.

She stood up and faced him for a minute, her eyes bright with tears, her hand pressed against her heart as if it hurt her. "All day I've been longing to see you," she said. "I've been wanting to tell you I'd marry you!"

At that he eagerly stretched out his hands toward her, but May pushed them away. She went on in a voice that was choked with tears:

"I was going to marry you for the sake of the home you could give me," she said frankly. "I was going to 'graft' on you just as you say I've been 'grafting' all my life on somebody or other. . . . Only I didn't think of it in that way. I thought I'd give you companionship in exchange for your money. And I could have helped you out with Sally, too. . . ."

Ulysses tapped his spectacles on the back of his hand through several moments of silence. He looked at May as if he had never seen her before. . . . the lovely turn of her cheek, the softness of her eyes, veiled as they were by tears.

"And so you would have married me without love . . . for the sake of having a home?" he asked. "You, who wanted to be homeless all along . . . 'footloose' as you called it!"

May nodded silently.

"Well," Ulysses went on, as if he were talking to himself, "I wouldn't have believed it possible to care about any woman as I do for you. . . . but I want you so much that I would have taken you on any terms, even those!"

May smiled mirthlessly.

"The last time I saw you I said I hoped I'd never see you again! I didn't mean it."

"You'll never take me on any terms," Mr. Forgan, she said stiffly. "You'll never get a chance to! And I hope I never see you again!" She turned on her heel and ran upstairs.

From the doorway of the guest room she watched him leave the house a few moments later and walk down to the curbstone with Sally and her swim.

HE was gone out of her life forever, thought May. The knowledge brought a feeling something like pain to her heart. . . . Why, how terrible it was going to be to see him again! How dreadful it was to lose that comforting feeling that he was waiting for her when she should tire of being "footloose," and want Journey's End!

She wanted it now . . . home and the peace of home . . . Journey's End!

"You certainly are the world's prize bonhead!" she told herself miserably.

IN the beginning of February May left the Gregorays and set herself up in housekeeping rooms. The two tiny squares of space on the top floor of an apartment building were hardly worthy of the word "rooms."

But May made of them a home . . . the first she had ever made in her life. As a bride she had walked into Dr. John's old home and lived there among his dead mother's belongings, taking no interest in them.

But this was different . . . this tiny flat filled with painted furniture that May bought on the installment plan. She loved everything in it, from the painted sugar tin in the tiny kitchen to the box couch in the tiny living-room.

The box couch became a bed at night when the living-room took on the aspect of a bedroom, with May's fresh clothes laid out for the morning.

She had to get up early these February mornings, in order to be at the office by 8 o'clock. For May was at work again at a stenographer's desk after 10 years of ease.

She had found her position . . . a responsible one with a firm of importers through Dick Gregory.

Mr. Phillimore, the head of the firm, was May's "boss." From him she took orders, and slow dictation. Mr. Phillimore loved to use big words, and he spelled them incorrectly for May, who knew how to spell them herself!

"What an old foggy he is!" she would think as she sat patiently beside his desk with her pad on her knee.

She would sit looking at the egg spots on Mr. Phillimore's tie, at his unshaven jaw and his lack-luster eye . . . and visualize Ulysses in his clean white linen, his well-pressed suits and general air of perfect grooming, his air of youth and vigor in spite of his 50 years.

And she would wonder why Herbert Waterbury at 45 had seemed so aged to her, while Ulysses, who was a good five years older, seemed no older than herself!

The last Saturday in March Mr. Phillimore discharged May. He explained to her that she ought to know how to telegraph in code if she was going to try to work for importers. And he added that she didn't take dictation fast enough anyway.

May was crushed.

She walked home under the heavy, leaden skies with a heart as heavy as they.

No job! And her month's rent due in a couple of days! Not only that, but she owed Dick Gregory two hundred dollars!

She sighed deeply. . . . What a struggle it was to earn enough money to keep body and soul together! And where was the joy of being alive, anyway?

And then, suddenly, something leaped in May's heart like a living flame.

Coming straight toward her down the sordid street was Ulysses Forgan! And suddenly life seemed very worthwhile, and the world a wonderful place to be living in!

All this because a middle-aged man had suddenly turned the corner and was coming toward her holding out his hand in greeting. He was smiling. . . . And May realized that she was almost running toward him in her eagerness to speak to him.

They stood there, wordless, smiling, shaking hands vigorously for a full minute before either spoke.

Then May said breathlessly: "The last time I saw you I said I hoped I'd never see you again! . . . I didn't mean it!"

"No?" Ulysses asked, replacing his hat, which he had swept off in greeting. "Are you sure you didn't mean it?"

May could only shake her head and laugh like a child that has been naughty and is glad to be forgiven.

"I've been working . . . you told me I ought to go to work to support myself, you know," she said after a minute or two. "But I just lost my job this afternoon. . . . After 10 years of idleness my typewriting hand has lost its cunning!"

"Ulysses looked at her closely. 'You're thinner,' he said after his long scrutiny. 'And too pale. Been shut in too much! Come and work for me. I've a nice sunny office, and I'll make you take two hours off every noon to get out in the air. . . . Will you start work for me Monday morning?'"

May shook her head. "No thanks," she said. "You told me once upon a time that I was a grafter! And I'm not going to prove it by 'grafting' on you! I'm so good as a stenographer now. I wouldn't honestly earn even a tiny salary. . . . Goodbye."

She held out her hand and Ulysses took it in a hard grip.

"But let me come to see you," he begged, and once more May shook her head.

"No," she said. "I'd rather not see you, somehow. . . . I want to be alone, away from everybody!" And with that she went.

THINK IT OVER

When the Creator had made all the good things;

It seemed there was still some dirty work to do.

So he made the beasts, the reptiles, and the poisonous insects, too.

But when he had finished,

He still had scraps left over

Which were too bad to put into the Rattler, the hyena or the skunk.

So he put the all into one body, covered it with suspicion.

Wrapped it with jealousy, marked it with a yellow streak.

And called it a KNOCKER.

This product was so fearful to contemplation that he had to make something to counteract it.

So he took a sunbeam, put into it the heart of a child, the brain of a man, wrapped it in equality and justice.

A worker for, and a supporter of Every good thing in the community And he named this a BOOSTER.
